When the Arctic and its inhabitants inspire our future

October 9, 10, 11, 2026 (Plestin-les-Grèves – Locquirec)

Three days of exchange and shared perspectives with distinguished guests from North Greenland (Qaanaaq, Savissivik) on key societal, territorial, and organizational challenges. Three days to question and listen, explore other ways of living and thinking, and other ways of doing things, in order to enrich ideas, visions, and projects.

With one certainty: we have much to learn from them and alongside them.

Three Days - Three Phases

Immersion – Dialogue(s) – Common(s)

With our guests from North Greenland

Olennguaq Kristensen

Miyuki Daorana

Aleqatsiaq Peary

Welcome desk opens at 2:00 PM to get acquainted and initiate exchanges among participants and with the guests.

Friday, October 9, 2026 6:00 PM - 8:30 PM | Plestin-les-Grèves (Salle An dour Meur)

IMMERSION: Lecture & Discussion – "Discovering Greenland and its Inhabitants"

(Session open to the general public)

A sensitive journey into the history, culture, and daily life of the inhabitants of North Greenland, through:

- (1) The presence of our Greenlandic guests, to share their own perspectives and answer questions from the audience.
- (2) A lecture by Christiane Drieux, anthropologist and leading specialist on Greenland, particularly the Avanersuaq region where our guests come from.
- (3) Testimonials from individuals who have set out to discover Greenland and its people (students, researchers, travelers, explorers, filmmakers, and photographers).

This lecture-discussion will be accompanied by photo presentations and film excerpts.

Saturday, October 10, 2026 9:00 AM - 6:00 PM | Locquirec (Grande salle de l'île Blanche)

DIALOGUE(S): "Exchanging, Discovering, Learning, Getting to Know One Another"

This is the core of the Triades, where participants engage directly with the Greenlandic guests, their way of living, thinking, and acting.

These dialogues are structured around four thematic sessions (1.5 hours each). Each session begins with a panel discussion prepared with selected participants who are particularly involved in the topic.

Guided by two facilitators, they will spark the discussion with the Greenlandic guests. The dialogue will then open up to the entire room and all participants (English/French translation provided).

The Four Thematic Sessions of Saturday, October 10

Connections to Nature

Our bonds with nature reflect, influence, and structure a wide range of topics: education in and through nature, economic development, health, climate change, tourism, risks, etc. Exploring how our guests perceive and live with nature can inspire participants in their own fields of interest (schools, outdoor activities, Corporate Social Responsibility, public policy, etc.).

The Individual, Communities, and Territories

Examining the place of the individual within various communities (family, professional, territorial, national, international) will address forms of solidarity across these scales, as well as balances, interactions, and potential alliances between different territorial levels. We will also explore the concept of "leadership" through a fresh lens during this session.

Knowledge, Culture, and Transmission

While the development and sharing of knowledge is a primary challenge for all societies, the ability of Greenlanders to maintain, transmit, and develop knowledge, practices, and culture over centuries—and through times of great disruption—opens up discussion on multiple topics related to the methods of transmission, and the very way knowledge is perceived and understood in close connection with practices.

Thinking and Living Transitions and Transformations

How do we transform ourselves? And how do we do so without losing who we are? This question has always been common to all communities and organizations. Our guests have navigated a century of profound mutations while preserving their culture. The challenges they face today—including climate change—are no less significant. Their insights and experience regarding transformation and transition under constrained, limited resources are highly valuable to share.

Sunday, October 11, 2026 9:00 AM - 2:00 PM | Locquirec (Grande salle de l'île Blanche)

(IN) COMMON: "Individual Shifts and Shared Challenges"

The dialogues will surface questions, ideas, and themes of mutual interest. Mixed sub-groups (participants and guests) will take up these concepts to establish initial frameworks before sharing and discussing them in a plenary assembly.

These exchanges will build upon the previous day's contributions and feed into the proceedings of the 2026 Triades du Trégor meetings.

Our goal is to produce official proceedings and, broadly speaking, ensure these three days leave a lasting impact through writing, audio, and visual media, and potentially spark ongoing connections, cooperation, and projects.

Registration and Participation

Deadline: Registration is open until September 15, up to a maximum of 70 available slots. (Information is updated weekly on www.triadesdutregor.fr, including the list of registered participants).

Availability: As of September 1, 2026 (the opening date of registration), 10 slots remain out of the maximum 70.
